FACES OF AFRICA

A Mystical View of Tribal Heritage

Dogon Tribal Mask, Mali.

A Mystical View of Tribal Heritage is an exhibit on loan from the International Museum Institute of New York. Faithfully recreated by award-winning artist Richard W. Jones (1934-2008), this critically acclaimed collection of authentic reproductions of ancient masks, murals, and sculptures celebrates 3,500 years of African tribal art and traditions. From ancient Nok heads to the spectacular masks of Dogon dances and contemporary South African murals, the popular Faces of Africa is an intimate and mystical view of the tribal heritage.

The Faces of Africa joins two other current exhibits, Act 1 - Africa East Meets Africa West, (GalerieFrancois Collection); Act 2 - The Spirit That Knows Beauty, (Demerson Collection), and Act 3 - Faces of Africa, (International Museum Institute of New York), hence 3 acts of Africa.

Beginning February 23, 2015 through August 31, 2015

One Market Square, Roanoke, VA 24011

Alberto Acosta, Curator

As a curator, composer and CEO at the International Museum Institute of New York (IMINY), Alberto Acosta is also an artist, entrepreneur and a philanthropist. He has traveled throughout the Caribbean and Latin America for the installation and completion of commissioned musical scores. His greatest pleasure comes from the opportunity to share his work with the public, to enhance education and promote tourism. Because of his compassion to share his works, he has brought this exhibit, "Faces of Africa," to share with the Roanoke Region.

Many thanks to the Science Museum of Western Virginia, for sponsoring the delivery of the collection from New York to Virginia, and special acknowledgement to Alberto Agosta, curator.
